INTRODUCTION :
A 26 year male surgical resident reported on 6 march 2021 with sudden onset central abdominal pain associated with bilious vomiting of one day duration. Pain later shifted to right lower quadrant abdomen. He developed fever 12hours after the onset of symptoms. He has been having episodic central abdominal pain since last one year. Clinical examination revealed moderate fever and tachycardia. Abdominal examination showed tenderness and guarding in right lower quadrant with presence of rebound tenderness. USG Abdomen showed tubular swollen non compressible structure with moderate fluid in RIF fossa. Sonological features were suggestive of Ac Appendicitis. Routine blood investigations revealed leucocytosis. KFT and LFT values were normal. RT-PCR was negative. Patient was instituted with NBM, Intravenous fluids, Broad spectrum Antibiotics. Laparoscopic appendectomy undertaken which revealed omentum wrapping the
